- So the user starts clicking the pictures that could no longer be his/her partner.
- Once (s)he finished clicking pictures his/her the timer stops blinking and his/her partners started once more.
- Next his partner asked a question
- User looks at his/her picture (s)he responded truthfully, and his/her partners timer lites up again.

Scenarios

Benny is a new user. Benny decided to click a link to “Guess Who”. When he clicked the page we decided to click Guest. There was a prompt that warned Benny he would not be able to track his stats. He clicked that he was sure and did not want to create a new account. Once he did this a screen popped up and said “searching for challenge” after a few moments a new page popped up. There was a prompt to pick a person and many people to choose from. He clicked a person, when clicked he saw a larger picture of this person and a prompt asking if he was sure that this was the person he wanted. After he clicked yes the page changed. Benny could see the same people he could choose from and his picture on the right side of the screen. under the list of people he could see a chat box, and two timers next to the chat box. Refer to how to play. This continued Until Benny said “Is your person Bill?” His partner responded with “Yes”. Once this happened there was a pop-up. Benny had 3 choices, continue, create new account, or done for now. He clicked create new account. He was prompted to enter his email address, a username, a password, re enter his password, his DOB, and a security code. He then confirmed his information, opened his email and entered the confirmation code, once he had done this he was brought back to the sign in.

Scenarios

Connor is a old user that has not played in quite some time. Connor's sister Megan finally hopped off of the computer. However when Connor approached the Computer Megan had left the "Guess Who" page open. Connor was curious however he did not remember his old password, so he clicked the forgot password button. He was prompted to enter his username and email, so he did. There was a pop-up telling him to check his email. So he did. There was an email from "Guess Who", so Connor clicked the email. There was a warning in the email, alerting him to not click the link if he did not request a forgotten password request. As he did request a new password he clicked the link. He was promoted to enter a new password and to re enter that password. He was brought back to the sign in page. Once there he put in his username and new password then clicked "sign in". Once he had logged in he clicked the "random challenge" button at the top right of the screen. After a few seconds of waiting on the "Searching for challenge" screen he was a prompted to pick a person with many people to choose from. He clicked a person, when clicked he saw a larger picture of this person and a prompt asking if he was sure that this was the person he wanted. After he clicked yes the page changed. Refer to how to play. After that game Connor had had enough for now. So when he was redirected to the profile page and clicked "logout" at the bottom right corner of the page.
